

SWEEPS SHIP SEVEN TIMES OVER THE GULF STREAM

The Laura M. Lunt Has Terrible Experience Before Rescuers Appear.

FOOD WASHED AWAY.

Wife and Child of Captain Johnson Endure Hardships With the Crew.

Went across the Gulf Stream and back again seven times in a succession of storms and then battered to bits by wind and sea, was the fate of the three-masted schooner Laura M. Lunt, which sailed from Norfolk, Va., for Jacksonville, Fla., on February 24.

Capt. Oscar Johnson, his wife and four-year-old daughter, Helma, reached here today from Philadelphia. First Mate Charles Anderson and the five men of the crew arrived on the Hamburg-American liner Prinzess Friedrich from Kingston, Jamaica.

The vessel was only two days out from Norfolk, when she ran into a storm. The wind blew in from the north, north-east and then switched to the south, south-west. The gale reached a hurricane force and came from all directions before the day had passed. Waves as high as topsails swept the schooner and tons of water tumbled down upon the deck. Sails were torn to shreds and they lay spangled with canvas clouds. The deck houses were stove in, the life boats smashed to pieces and the equipment carried away.

DEER BABY AFLOAT WITH CHAIRS AND TABLES.

Mr. Johnson, the captain's wife, took her turn on deck with the crew. Every evening she ran into the cabin to find everything afloat, even the deer baby was floating about with the chairs and tables. She grouped the little one and placed her in the top bunk. Then she started to bale the water out. She was at that work for the day and five nights and there was no respite from the storm.

Great waves rushed through the cabin and galley and carried away the deer baby's provisions. For days there was little or nothing to eat on the vessel. On March 4 the Lunt was 60 miles to the north of the Cuban coast. All hope of saving the vessel had been abandoned and the captain for anybody on board being saved was exceedingly slim.

Two steamers appeared, but neither made any offer of assistance. One came by all during the night of March 5 and then sailed away in the morning. The Lunt had sprung a leak and was making water at the rate of 12 inches an hour. With her leaky bottom there was little hope of reaching shore.

On the morning of March 6 the schooner Windermere, Capt. George, bound from Norfolk for Kingston, Jamaica, hove in sight. The schooner had also been buffeted by the storm which assailed the Laura M. Lunt, and had only one good boat remaining. This was lowered and sent to the side of the sinking vessel. The sea was running wild at the time and the little craft was almost smashed to splinters against the schooner's timbers.

CAPTAIN THE LAST TO LEAVE THE SINKING SHIP.

Assisted with water the boat was lowered from the Lunt with the Captain's wife and child and two of the crew. Another trip had to be made to the stranded schooner to take off the captain and the rest of the crew, the captain being the last to leave. The last seen of the schooner was lying over on her beam end.

MRS. W. W. LAKE

Tells Others How to Get Strong and Well.

Mrs. W. W. Lake of Aberdeen, Minn., says: "The gripe had left me in a weak, run-down condition from which I suffered for some time. I tried different remedies but nothing seemed to do me any good until I took Vinol, from which I received great benefit. My cough is almost entirely gone and I am strong and well again, and I am glad to recommend Vinol to others who suffer as I did."

Mrs. Lake's recovery was due to the beneficial action of the medicinal elements extracted from cod's livers—combined with the blood making and strength creating properties of tonic iron, which are contained in Vinol and the cough disappeared as a natural result.

We guarantee that Vinol will do all you desire and will pay back your money if Vinol does not satisfy you.

her beam end, her cargo of coal having shifted and great waves were washing over her, threatening to engulf her every moment.

The vessel's beams had opened and water was pouring into her. There was no hope for her, according to her captain and crew. The Windermere took all hands to Kingston from where the captain and his wife and baby girl were taken to Philadelphia and the rest of the crew brought here on the Prinzess Friedrich.

Capt. Johnson said that he had weathered many a storm but had never had a like experience in the cyclone which wrecked his ship. Until the Windermere hove in sight there was no hope. All hands were starving and not a man on the schooner was fit for work when they were picked up.

Capt. Johnson and his wife have been married five years. All of this time, with the exception of six weeks, have been spent at sea by Mrs. Johnson.

Little Helma was born ashore, but has been at sea ever since. She was the only lively one on board during the storm. She was not seasick at any time.

2 BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS.

Creditors Close Down on McPartland & O'Flaherty.

Twenty minutes after a petition in bankruptcy was filed against the McPartland & O'Flaherty Dry Goods Company (Inc.), today in the United States District Court another following setting forth that the company's liabilities are $110,000 and its assets at $50,000.

The second petition asserted that the banks were owed $50,000 and merchandise creditors $50,000. The assets are the store fixtures at No. 673 Eighth avenue and the outstanding accounts.

Charles L. Greenhall, an attorney, filed the first petition for the H. B. Clavin Company, Elms & Nelson, and M. A. S. Company. The second was filed by Rosenberg & Lewis.

'SUFFRAGETTE' IS SCANDAL.

COLOGNE, March 18.—For calling a woman school principal a "suffragette" the wife of a physician in a neighboring village was today convicted and fined on a charge of slander, according to the Cologne Gazette. The offense was committed in the course of a quarrel over the punishment of the school principal of the physician's daughter.

The complainant in supporting the charge before the Court argued that the suffragettes had shown themselves to be scarcely normal. Educated people, she said, were enraged against them owing to their outrages and nobody would intrust children to her if she were a suffragette.

The defendant refused to apologize and declared that the teacher had acted like a suffragette. She was thereupon ordered to pay a fine.

THE SIMPLE LIFE.
(From the Glasgow News.)
A Texan who had suffered a breakdown spent several months at a famous cure. Meeting Col. William Greene Stretet upon returning home, he proceeded to assert that his health had been completely restored, that he was in the pink of condition and that he had learned how to live.

"I hear you have quit eating meat," said Stretet. "Don't you eat any at all?"

"Not a bite," answered the restored one. "And you've cut out liquor?"

"Completely. Don't touch a drop." "Quit coffee?"

"Yes." "Chewing and smoking?"

"I don't use tobacco in any form, nor stimulants of any kind."

"And the doctor thinks you'll live?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well," said Stretet as he lighted a fresh cigar, "what in thunder do you want to live for?"

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES.

(From the Chicago Tribune.)

When those little red ants get into your house and overrun the pantry you can obtain partial relief by persuading some member of the family who has a copious vocabulary to utter a few short and emphatic remarks.

Don't make the mistake of having the monthly magazines you take bound into volumes. Some day, if you do, they will fill all your bookcases.

CORRECT IN THE CONCRETE.

(From the Washington Times.)

Having finished the reading of a well-known poem, the teacher asked the question:

"And now can any little boy or girl tell me just what is meant by 'Foot-prints in the sands of time'?"

One little boy waved a chubby hand.

"Well, Robert?"

And Robert replied:

"Please, ma'am, I guess it means 'at somebody stepped on the cement sidewalk before it was dry.'"

THE SWASHER THE BETTER.

(From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

A crowd of husky Westerners were plunging through the alfalfa in pursuit of a Japanese berry picker.

"Hold on, boys," cried a passing humanitarian. "You wouldn't hurt such a little fellow, would you?"

"You bet we would," roared the leader. "We'd beat him up if he was twice as small!"

And the mad pursuit went right along.

WON'T HURT CHILDREN TO KNOW ABOUT CRIME, MAYOR MITCHELL SAYS

He Thinks They Ought to Learn of It and of the Punishments for It.

Mayor Mitchell says it won't harm school children one iota to know that there is crime in the world—that the sooner they know it the better; in fact, that they ought to know of crime existence and the punishments that go with it.

It was at a meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission that Reginald Pelham Bolton, speaking as a Washington Heights property owner, wanted action deferred in the matter of converting the old library building at No. 922 St. Nicholas avenue into a police court until the residents of the neighborhood had been heard from through their improvement association.

"Have you any personal objection to the court project?" asked the Mayor.

"Public School No. 56, with 2,400 pupils, is across the street from the front entrance to the building," replied Mr. Bolton. He thought that if the prisoners were taken to and from court across Aqueduct Park to the rear entrance the sensibilities of the neighborhood would be shocked. And if the prisoners used the front entrance the school children would see them.

"And what of it?" asked the Mayor in surprise. "Don't you think that children ought to know that there is crime in the world—that it exists all around them? Perhaps if the children knew more about it they would be better off. At any rate the sooner the children learn that a crime is an offense against organized charity and that the police courts are there to punish the violators, perhaps the better it will be for them."

The court in Washington Heights is recommended by Chief Magistrate Thayer and by the Board of Police Commissioners. It is the upper section of the city now have to travel from points as far north as Spuyten Duyvil Creek down to Harlem. The property owners of that section who object to the converting of the old library into a court will be heard from at next week's meeting.

ST. PATRICK'S CHEER LED MAN TO SHOWER MONEY ON RAIDERS

Lawyer Says Champagne Inspired Realty Man, but He Is Held in Court.

Champagne-inspired chivalry was the defense of John J. McQuade, a real estate dealer of No. 208 East Seventy-sixth street, when he was arraigned in West Side Police Court to-day charged with trying to bribe Detectives Dolan and Jones of Inspector Dwyer's staff. McQuade was attired in a wrinkled dress suit and carried a badly disorganized plug hat.

Jones told Magistrate Simms that after he and Dolan arrested Laura Carleton, Dolores Spencer and Anna Gillespie early to-day on a charge of maintaining a disorderly house in the Albany Apartments, Broadway and Fifty-first street, McQuade approached him and asked him to release the women.

McQuade, according to Jones, described himself as a particular friend of Inspector Dillon of Brooklyn and other police officials and finally slipped each of the detectives a $5 bill. Thereupon they arrested him.

"It is true no doubt," said Morris Gossett, counsel for McQuade, "that my client handed the policemen money and asked the mito release these young women. But, your Honor, he never saw the women before and does not know them."

"He was on his way home from a banquet, your Honor, full of good cheer and humanity and chivalry and champagne when he saw these women in custody. His sympathy was touched. It broke his heart to see anybody suffer. So, like the gentleman that he is he sought to free the women by paying the policemen. That is all there is to the case, your Honor."

McQuade looked at his lawyer with a dazed expression while the Magistrate fixed him at $1,000 and adjourned the case until Friday afternoon.

Frank McQuade of No. 411 East Eighty-sixth street furnished the bond and took John J. away in a taxicab.

ST. PATRICK'S CHEER LED MAN TO SHOWER MONEY ON RAIDERS

Lawyer Says Champagne Inspired Realty Man, but He Is Held in Court.

When Mrs. Mary Orban, a widow, living at No. 347 First avenue, got up to-day to go to work she found her fifteen-year-old son, John dead in his bed. Investigation by the police established that the boy was poisoned by drinking wood alcohol.

John worked as an errand boy and lived with his mother in a three-room flat. Mrs. Orban says she went to bed at 7 o'clock last night after drinking rum and tea for a cold. The boy was not at home when she went to sleep and she did not hear him come in.

In the kitchen of the flat was a bottle of wood alcohol which Mrs. Orban bought several weeks ago, she says, with the mistaken idea that it was a cleaning fluid. The bottle was full last night—it was half empty this morning. The police theory is that the boy, who had been mother asleep, drank a quantity of the alcohol.

No More Troublesome Superfluous Hairs

(The Modern Beauty)

Nothing is quite so annoying to a woman as ugly, fuzzy growths on the face, and while the electric needle brings relief, it is no more effective than a simple paste made with powdered delatone and water. This paste is spread on the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off. After this treatment the skin should be washed to free it from the remaining delatone and it will be soft, clear and hairless. Be sure, however, you get the real delatone—Advt.
